

Empowering the BFA Staff Member

BFA is passionate about missional Christian education. We are looking for staff who share in this vision — people who want to reach the world by deeply investing in the lives of these global students.

BFA is a place of training and development where staff can grow in their vision for the world through ministering to families serving around the globe. Whether here for short-term or career service, staff benefit from the school's commitment to invest in their lives, so they can in turn serve as resources to other international Christian schools or as representatives of missions in the local church, promoting a bigger vision for God's work around the world. Every year BFA needs numerous teachers, dorm parents, resident assistants, and other support staff that will come to share their lives with our students and be trained to invest globally.

Engaging the BFA Partner

Will you Give?

All BFA staff members are missionaries who raise their support from among churches, friends, and family. Because BFA doesn't pay salaries, the school is able to reduce the cost of educating the students, a benefit to their missionary parents. Please consider becoming a BFA Partner by financially supporting a BFA staff member. Your financial gift will not only impact the staff member, but helps keep missionaries on the field and invests in students who will have a global impact.

Will you Go?

Our commitment to quality, international, Christian education means that BFA is a great place to grow through service. If you think BFA might be the place for you, please go to our website and fill out our preliminary on-line application. Our personnel department will then contact you about our current staffing needs. Prayerfully consider how God may want to use you to be involved in global missions at Black Forest Academy.

BEYOND

Black Forest Academy, a school primarily for missionary children, provides a quality, international, Christian education that equips its students to influence their world through biblical thought, character, and action.

Black Forest Academy is a co-laborer in the evangelical missionary movement. The school supports parents serving in over 50 countries throughout Europe, Central Asia, the Middle East, and Africa, through the education and care of their children. The student body of 350 multi-lingual, multi-cultural students from grades 1-12 participates in a rigorous English language, North American-based curriculum. Its diploma and transcript are recognized for admissions into North American universities and other English-speaking colleges worldwide.

BFA has developed over 30 years of boarding school experience and it shows in the quality of the program. For the boarding students, life at BFA has a "home-away-from-home" feel. All residence staff members are missionaries who have been carefully selected for the crucial role of meeting the physical, emotional, and social needs of boarding students. They view themselves as partners with parents in the important task of nurturing students and preparing them for life after high school graduation.

Beyond Black Forest Academy

BFA is more than a boarding school. BFA is a catalyst in the mission movement. The school's vision is to equip its students to become global Christians, enable their parents to serve where God has called them, and empower their staff in life-long missionary service and advocacy. The school desires to impact the world far beyond Black Forest Academy.

Equipping the BFA Student

The majority of BFA students have spent a significant part of their developmental years outside their parents' passport culture. Bringing together this unique group of students, who have experienced a variety of cultures, only serves to foster an even broader and deeper view of the world. The BFA educational and residential programs help students develop a biblical perspective of life and train them to fulfill God's purpose for their lives personally and vocationally.

BFA's vision is to see globally-minded Christians changing their world for Christ. Many BFA graduates will choose to live outside their passport country as adults. Their multi-dimensional worldview perfectly suits our ever-changing global work environment. From Bible translators and church planters for remote tribes in Africa, to religious freedom advocates in Washington, D.C., BFA alumni are showing up in some amazing places wanting to change their world.

Enabling the BFA Parent

The parents of BFA students have made the difficult decision to send their children to boarding school. They are balancing the educational, social, and emotional needs of their child with the demands of their ministry. BFA looks to make that decision a little easier by providing the best educational and living environment possible.

Knowing that our son was being well-cared for and nurtured spiritually gave us peace of mind to focus on our ministry.

He grew and matured in many ways, particularly, spiritually, academically, emotionally, and is well-prepared for his next step of entering university in the USA.
– Spain

Having our daughter here has allowed us to serve in the Middle East knowing that she was in a wonderful, nurturing, Christian environment. BFA will always be special to us.

It met a great need in our family life. We will always have a piece of our heart reserved for BFA.

– Middle East

We face hardships on all sides. It is difficult to provide for our children. BFA is the best choice I can think of for a balanced education – the field trips, sports, academic excellence, and a chance to find

God on their own. Our ministry assignment in a closed Muslim culture would not be possible if BFA were not available to us. We are now part of a team that is a spiritual hot coal in a cold place of Islamic bondage. The few Christians that accept Christ each year are an encouragement to us.
